About Litix S.p.A.

Founded in 2023 through the merger of ROBOTOR and TORART, followed by the establishment of AIVOX, which is currently 60% controlled, LITIX aims to merge traditional techniques with advanced technologies such as robotics and 3D printing, setting new standards in art and craftsmanship. Over the past years, ROBOTOR and TORART have gained worldwide recognition, attracting artists and designers like Jeff Koons, Maurizio Cattelan, Barry X Ball, Francesco Vezzoli, Vanessa Beecroft, Giuseppe Penone, Zaha Hadid, and many more. Major museums and large companies have also utilized their robots to reproduce historical artworks, garnering global media attention from outlets like the New York Times, Washington Post, CBS, RAI, Corriere della Sera, DOMUS, and over 400 others. Through its TORART business unit, LITIX creates sculptures, contemporary art, and design works using advanced robotic technologies from ROBOTOR for hard material processing. The ROBOTOR unit specializes in designing and assembling anthropomorphic robots for multi-axis milling, used for marble, stone, wood, and plastic processing, both for TORART and the broader market. The core of ROBOTOR is OR-OS, a revolutionary self-programming software for CNC milling. With intuitive interfaces that require no specific programming skills, OR-OS allows anyone to use the robot for complex tasks. OR-OS starts from a 3D file and automatically converts the model into tool paths without operator intervention. The AIVOX unit enhances LITIX's capabilities through creative engineering and additive manufacturing technologies, focusing on designing, software development, and producing integrated solutions that optimize industrial processes, offering clients personalized and innovative solutions. LITIX targets those who are not satisfied with the status quo, who see beyond traditional limitations, and seek solutions that combine craftsmanship with technological innovation, aiming for excellence, uniqueness, and innovation in material processing.
